

You are invited to a conference on Saturday 11th November 2017 at Mander Hall, Hamilton House, Mabledon Place, London WC1H 9BD

A “National Education Service”: - What should it mean?

Labour’s widely-welcomed 2017 Manifesto included a promise to create a National Education Service.

This conference will ask what ideas lie behind this and what might it mean in practice. We will be asking:

- What entitlement should a National Education Service offer to all learners?
- How can we improve access to education and training opportunities for all?
- How can a National Service offer locally-managed delivery?
- How can an NES deliver lifelong education free at the point of use?

Speakers will include Kevin Courtney and Mary Bousted of the new National Education Union.

What’s on your wish-list?

- ◇ Fully-comprehensive secondary schools?
- ◇ Inclusive schools?
- ◇ Properly funded further education and sixth forms?
- ◇ Well paid teachers?

Online booking will be available from 1st October.

We are grateful to the National Education Union for allowing us to use Mander Hall.
